Q: Floating Point Compliant Sort - Converting decimal to binary

I'm trying to create a sort algorithm that is relatively close to a floating point comparison. I have a function that compares a number, and returns the closest float to its binary representation. Here is a test:

#include <template>
T d2b(T value, int precision) {
    int v = value;
    if (precision == 0)
        return std::round(value * 10.0) / 10.0;
    else if (precision == 1)
        return std::round(value * 2.0) / 2.0;
    else if (precision == 2)
        return std::round(value * 4.0) / 4.0;
    else
        return std::round(value * 8.0) / 8.0;
}

void main() { float f(3.0
```
